

DCAD EARLY ACTION DEADLINE

For students considering Delaware College of Art and Design as one of their top college choices, the Admissions Office is introducing the Early Action option.

Early Action applications and supporting documents must be postmarked by December 1, 2010 for fall 2011 admission. The primary reason to apply Early Action to DCAD is to receive an admission and merit scholarship decision before January 1 of the senior year. For students applying after the Early Action deadline, merit scholarships will be awarded after the priority admission deadline of March 15, 2011. Admission notification will be determined within a two to three week time frame after receiving all required application materials.

DCAD will continue to operate on a rolling admission cycle on a space-available basis after the March 15 priority deadline.

The Admissions Office uses the same admission standards during Early Action and rolling admission processes. The only difference for Early Action applicants is that these are the first applications reviewed; therefore more seats are available at this time.

DCAD Early Action

- Non-binding / non-restrictive (this means you can still apply to other colleges and/or attend another college)
- May 1 tuition deposit deadline (same deadline as regular admission; you are not required to make your college decision early)
- Apply by December 1 (submit all materials including application, HS transcript, portfolio)
- Admission Decision and merit scholarship decision mailed out on December 21.

The 2011 online applications are available beginning August 1, 2010 at www.dcad.edu, click on "Apply Now," or print a paper application from the DCAD web site.
